1 NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION TO DISMISS

2 Intervenor-Defendant League of Women Voters of California (the 3 “League”) respectfully moves for this Court to dismiss the United States’s 4 Complaint because it fails to state a claim for which relief can be granted pursuant 5 to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). In support of their Motion, the League 6 submits and incorporates the below Memorandum of Points and Authorities.

7 On November 19, 2025, the Parties appeared and stipulated to a briefing and 8 hearing schedule for Defendants’ motions to dismiss that contemplates the League 9 filing this present Motion to Dismiss by November 20, 2025. Dkt. No. 65.

INTRODUCTION

The right to vote is “of the most fundamental significance under our constitutional structure.” No Labels Party of Arizona v. Fontes, 142 F.4th 1226, 1231 (9th Cir. 2025) (citation omitted). It is “preservative of all [other] rights” because it guards against tyranny and ensures the competition of ideas amongst our elected officials. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 370 (1886).

It is in this context that Congress has repeatedly legislated to protect the franchise, including through the National Voter Registration Act (“NVRA”), 52 U.S.C. § 20501 et seq., the Help America Vote Act (“HAVA”), 52 U.S.C. § 20901 et seq., and the Civil Rights Act of 1960 (“CRA”), 52 U.S.C. § 20701 et seq. These statutes were all passed for the express purpose of ensuring that eligible Americans—especially racial minorities and voters with disabilities—can participate in free, fair, and secure elections. Congress designed the NVRA to limit “discriminatory and unfair registration laws and procedures” that restrict voter participation, particularly among racial minorities. 52 U.S.C. § 20501(a)(3). Similarly, Congress designed HAVA to help Americans vote by investing in election administration that would improve “accessibility and quantity of polling places” for those with disabilities and limited English proficiency. 52 U.S.C. § 20901(b)(1)(G). And the Department of Justice (“DOJ”) itself explains that Title III of the CRA, its election records provision, was designed to “secure a more effective protection of the right to vote.” C.R. Div., U.S. DOJ, Federal Law Constraints on Post-Election “Audits” 2 (Jul. 28, 2021), <https://perma.cc/B6Q4-TR6J> (quoting State of Alabama ex rel. Gillion v. Rogers, 187 F. Supp. 848, 853 (M.D. Ala. 1960)).

The United States’s demand for California’s unredacted voter file—which contains sensitive personal information including a driver’s license number, a state identification number, or a Social Security number from every voter in the state—runs afoul of the core purposes of these statutes and is contrary to law. To be sure,

1 the public disclosure of state voting records is a critical transparency measure that 2 helps maintain the accuracy of the voter rolls and, of utmost importance, ensures 3 that citizens are not erroneously removed from the voter records. Yet releasing the 4 State's voter records without redaction of sensitive personal information would 5 deter voter participation and undermine the right to vote. It would also violate state 6 law meant to prevent the erosion of that right. Indeed, and as many courts have 7 held, redacting sensitive personal information when releasing state voting records 8 is essential to strike a balance between guaranteeing transparency in elections and 9 ensuring voters' sensitive information is kept confidential so they can exercise their 10 fundamental right to vote.

11 The United States cannot point to any authority that supports its demand for 12 unredacted voter data: the NVRA only requires disclosure of redacted data, the 13 United States has not and cannot state a basis and purpose for its request for data 14 under the CRA (and even documents properly requested should be redacted), and 15 HAVA contains no data disclosure provisions at all. Because the United States has 16 failed to state a legally cognizable claim, the Court should dismiss the Complaint 17 in its entirety under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

18 BACKGROUND

19 We incorporate by reference the factual background provided in Defendants' 20 Motions to Dismiss (Dkt. 37-1 and Dkt. 62-1) to avoid restating facts already before 21 the Court.

22 LEGAL STANDARD

23 A court must dismiss a complaint if, accepting all well-pleaded factual 24 allegations as true, it does not "state a claim upon which relief can be granted." 25 Fed. R. Civ. P. 12\(b\)\(6\); Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). When 26 considering a motion to dismiss, a court need not accept the complaint's legal 27 conclusions. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. A complaint must state a "plausible claim for 28 relief" and contain more than "[t]hreadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of 1 action, supported by mere conclusory statements.” Id. at 678–79. A complaint must 2 be dismissed if it “fails to state a cognizable legal theory or fails to allege sufficient 3 factual support for its legal theories.” Caltex Plastics, Inc. v. Lockheed Martin 4 Corp., 824 F.3d 1156, 1159 (9th Cir. 2016).

5 ARGUMENT

6 I. Plaintiff Is Not Entitled to California’s Full Unredacted Voter List 7 Under the NVRA.

8 The United States invokes the NVRA to demand California’s unredacted 9 voter list, Compl. ¶¶ 12–21, 34, 50–56, but the statute does not authorize such 10 disclosure. Section 8(i)(1) of the NVRA requires states to provide “all records 11 concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the 12 purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters” 13 upon request. 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1). Anyone—including individual voters, 14 groups that protect the right to vote, and government officials—has the same right 15 to records under the NVRA. Voting rights advocates have consistently relied on 16 the NVRA to investigate infringements on the right to vote, including whether 17 election officials have improperly denied or cancelled voter registrations. See, e.g., 18 Project Vote/Voting for Am., Inc. v. Long, 682 F.3d 331, 333 (4th Cir. 2012) 19 (nonprofit investigating improper rejection of voter registrations submitted by 20 students at a historically Black university).

21 However, the information required to be disclosed under the NVRA is not 22 without limits. As federal courts have consistently found, providing for the 23 redaction of sensitive personal information strikes the necessary balance that the 24 Constitution demands: protecting both the fundamental right to vote and 25 transparency in our elections. This is necessary to safeguard voters’ constitutional 26 right to participate in elections, consistent with each state’s authority to prescribe 27 the time, place, and manner of elections. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 4, cl. 1.

1 A. The Constitution requires redaction under the NVRA.

2 Since the NVRA is silent as to how sensitive personal information should be 3 treated during disclosure, see 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1), the Court must interpret the 4 statute in a manner that does not unconstitutionally burden the right to vote. See 5 Kim Ho Ma v. Ashcroft, 257 F.3d 1095, 1111 (9th Cir. 2001) (recognizing “a statute 6 should be construed to avoid constitutional problems so long as the saving 7 construction is not ‘plainly contrary to the intent of Congress’” (citation omitted)).
8 Federal courts throughout the country have consistently struck this balance, 9 interpreting the “all records concerning” language in Section 8(i)(1) to permit—10 and even in some cases require—redaction and the protection of sensitive materials.
11 Indeed, as the First Circuit has noted, “nothing in the text of the NVRA prohibits 12 the appropriate redaction of uniquely or highly sensitive personal information in 13 the Voter File,” and as such, “the proper redaction of certain personal information 14 in the Voter File can further assuage the potential privacy risks implicated by the 15 public release of the Voter File.” Pub. Int. Legal Found., Inc. v. Bellows, 92 F.4th 16 36, 56 (1st Cir. 2024); see also Pub. Int. Legal Found., Inc. v. N.C. State Bd. of 17 Elections, 996 F.3d 257, 266–68 (4th Cir. 2021) (holding that the potential 18 connection to ongoing criminal investigations and the possibility of erroneously 19 labeling a voter as a noncitizen and subjecting them to public harassment warrants 20 maintaining confidentiality of records).

21 Indeed, the Fourth Circuit has held that redaction may be affirmatively 22 required to the extent the disclosure of such sensitive material would “create[] an 23 intolerable burden on [the constitutional] . . . right [to vote] as protected by the First 24 and Fourteenth Amendments.” Project Vote, 682 F.3d at 339 (quoting Greidinger 25 v. Davis, 988 F.2d 1344, 1355 (4th Cir. 1993)). The Court in Project Vote, even 26 while granting access to a state’s voter registration applications for inspection and 27 photocopying, ensured the redaction of Social Security numbers, which it found 28 are “uniquely sensitive and vulnerable to abuse.” Id. (citation omitted). In coming

1 to this conclusion, the Court emphasized that the NVRA reflected Congress’s view 2 that the right to vote was “fundamental,” and that the unredacted release of records 3 risked deterring citizens from registering to vote and thus created an “intolerable 4 burden” on this fundamental right. Id. at 334, 339 (citations omitted). If disclosure 5 is compelled here contrary to existing legal protections, California voters “may 6 become less engaged and reluctant to register to vote or otherwise participate in the 7 political process,” Dkt. 24-1, ¶ 23, the exact risk warned of in Project Vote. 682
F.3d at 339. The public disclosure provisions of the NVRA must be interpreted to 9 avoid this unconstitutional burden. See id.; Bellows, 92 F.4th at 56. And courts have 10 consistently recognized that the NVRA disclosure provisions do not compel the 11 release of sensitive information that is otherwise protected by federal or state laws, 12 such as California’s privacy law that is applicable here. See, e.g., N.C. State Bd. of 13 Elections, 996 F.3d at 264; Pub. Int. Legal Found. v. Boockvar, 431 F. Supp. 3d 14 553, 561–63 (M.D. Pa. 2019); Project Vote, Inc. v. Kemp, 208 F. Supp. 3d 1320, 15 1344–45 (N.D. Ga. 2016); see also Pub. Int. Legal Found., Inc. v. Dahlstrom, 673 16 F. Supp. 3d 1004, 1015–16 (D. Alaska 2023); Pub. Int. Legal Found., Inc. v.
17 Matthews, 589 F. Supp. 3d 932, 942 (C.D. Ill. 2022), clarified on denial of recons., 18 No. 20-CV-3190, 2022 WL 1174099 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 20, 2022).

19 The United States has itself admitted—on multiple occasions, and as recently 20 as last year—that the NVRA does not prohibit the States from redacting “uniquely 21 sensitive information” when disclosing voting records. See, e.g., Brief for the 22 United States as Amicus Curiae, Bellows, 92 F.4th 56 (No. 23-1361), 2023 WL 23 4882397 (“United States PILF Amicus Brief”), at *27–28; Brief for the United 24 States as Amicus Curiae at 28–29, Pub. Int. Legal Found. v. Sec’y Commonwealth
25 of Pa., 136 F.4th 456 (3d Cir. 2025), (Nos. 23-1590 and 23-1591), 26 <https://perma.cc/3BQ9-36UJ> (“States may redact certain information before 27 disclosing Section 8(i) records.”).

28

1 As with any requester of records under the NVRA, the United States should 2 be afforded access to the voting records contemplated under Section 8(i) of the 3 NVRA. But federal court precedent is clear that this access is not unfettered and 4 instead must always be balanced against privacy protections that are vital to 5 ensuring that citizens' fundamental right to vote is not burdened.

6 B. The NVRA does not preempt California privacy law.

7 Contrary to the United States' about-face on this issue, there is no conflict
8 between the NVRA and California's privacy law.¹ Federal laws like the NVRA 9 preempt state election laws only when there is an actual conflict, such that the two 10 sets of law cannot be read consistently with one another. Arizona v. Inter Tribal 11 Council of Ariz., Inc., 570 U.S. 1, 9 (2013) (holding that the NVRA preempts state 12 election law only insofar as the two are inconsistent); see also Oklahoma v. Castro- 13 Huerta, 597 U.S. 629, 642 (2022) ("The Supremacy Clause cannot 'be deployed' 14 "to elevate abstract and unenacted legislative desires above state law'"') (citation 15 omitted).

16 California's voter privacy law, Cal. Elec. Code § 2194(b)(1); Cal. Gov't 17 Code §§ 7924.000(b)-(c), is on all fours with the governing federal case law. Courts 18 have consistently held both that redactions are appropriate to accommodate and 19 harmonize state privacy laws while ordering the disclosure of documents as 20 mandated by the NVRA, see, e.g., Matthews, 589 F. Supp. 3d at 942; Kemp, 208
21 F. Supp. 3d at 1344–45, and that redactions and preserving confidential information 22 may even be required to protect the constitutional right to vote, see, e.g., Project
23 Vote, 682 F.3d at 339; Bellows, 92 F.4th at 56. If Plaintiff is permitted to engineer 24 a false conflict between the NVRA and California's privacy laws, it will force the 25 Secretary of State to violate California law and potentially the federal Constitution, 26 stripping millions of Californians of their privacy and stifling Californian voter 27

28 ¹ Def. State of California Mem. of P. & A. in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. to Dismiss ("State MTD"), Dkt. 37-1 at 14–16 provides additional authority on this point.

1 registration, all while exceeding both the purpose of and statutory authority
2 provided by the NVRA. See United States PILF Amicus Brief, 2023 WL 4882397
3 at *27–28 (arguing Section 8(i) does not compel production of unredacted social 4 security numbers and driver’s license numbers as state limits on voter information 5 are not preempted when they impact uses that “would not further the NVRA’s 6 purposes”).

7 II. Plaintiff Fails to State a Cognizable Claim Under Title III of the CRA.

8 Congress enacted the public records provisions in Title III of the CRA to 9 facilitate investigations of civil rights violations preventing eligible citizens from 10 voting due to discrimination. See H.R. Rep. No. 86-956 at 7 (1959) (indicating the 11 purpose of Title III “is to provide a more effective protection of the right of all 12 qualified citizens to vote without discrimination on account of race”). Title III 13 requires that records requested by the Attorney General be made “available for 14 inspection, reproduction, and copying at the principal office of [the] custodian.” 52 15 U.S.C. § 20703.

16 The Attorney General’s request here is contrary to the CRA for at least two 17 reasons. First, Plaintiff failed to provide “a statement of the basis and the purpose” 18 supporting its records requests as required by the statute. Id. The Complaint 19 provides no basis to conclude that unredacted records will aid an assessment of 20 California’s compliance with the list maintenance provisions of the NVRA or 21 HAVA. Second, to the extent Plaintiff is or becomes entitled to any records under 22 the CRA, those records must be redacted—as they must be for the requests under 23 the NVRA—to uphold the privacy and constitutional rights of California voters.

25

26

27

28

1 A. Plaintiff's demand for records fails to meet the statutory 2 requirements of Title III of the CRA.

3 Plaintiff's request to California fails to provide "a statement of the basis and 4 the purpose," id., sufficient to support disclosure of the unredacted voter file.² 5 Indeed, neither the Complaint nor the DOJ letter that invoked Title III identify a 6 sufficient purpose or basis supporting the records request.

7 "basis" and "purpose" under Title III have consistently been treated as 8 distinct concepts. Kennedy v. Lynd, 306 F.2d 222, 229 n.6 (5th Cir. 1962) (showing 9 that basis was the underlying information providing the grounds for the complaint); 10 In re Coleman, 208 F. Supp. 199, 199–200 (S.D. Miss. 1962) (same), aff'd sub
11 nom. Coleman v. Kennedy, 313 F.2d 867 (5th Cir. 1963). The United States' failure 12 to articulate both a sufficient basis and purpose underlying its request for the 13 unredacted voter file is enough to invalidate the CRA claim.

14 While that statute does not define basis or purpose, courts look to the 15 "ordinary meaning" of undefined statutory terms. Trim v. Reward Zone USA LLC, 16 76 F.4th 1157, 1161 (9th Cir. 2023). Contemporaneous case law immediately 17 following the enactment of Title III shows that "basis" is the statement for why the 18 Attorney General believes there is a violation of federal civil rights law, and the 19 "purpose" explains how the requested records would help determine if there is a 20 violation of the law. See Lynd, 306 F.2d at 229 n.6. The basis and purpose 21 requirements under the CRA are critical safeguards, so that the statute cannot be 22 used as a fishing expedition to obtain records for either speculative or unrelated 23 reasons. For example, the Attorney General could not use the CRA to obtain voting 24 records because it wanted to verify taxpayer addresses. See State of Ala. ex rel.
25 Gallion v. Rogers, 187 F. Supp. 848, 853 (M.D. Ala. 1960) ("Title III provides—

1 if properly applied and enforced—an effective means whereby preliminary 2 investigations of registration practices can be made in order to determine whether 3 or not such practices conform to constitutional principles.”), aff’d sub nom.
4 Dinkens v. Att’y Gen. of U.S., 285 F.2d 430 (5th Cir. 1961). The statutory basis and 5 purpose requirements are not perfunctory but require a specific statement detailing 6 the reason(s) for requesting the information and how that information will aid in 7 the investigatory analysis.

8 In the context of administrative subpoenas, an analogous power by which 9 federal agencies obtain records in service of investigations, courts have found that 10 the test of judicial enforcement of such subpoenas includes an evaluation of 11 whether the investigation is “conducted pursuant to a legitimate purpose,” Lynn v.
12 Biderman, 536 F.2d 820, 824 (9th Cir. 1976) (citing United States v. Powell, 379 13 U.S. 48, 57–58 (1964)), and that such subpoenas “may not be so broad so as to be 14 in the nature of a ‘fishing expedition,’” Peters v. United States, 853 F.2d 692, 700
15 (9th Cir. 1988). Indeed, courts have explained that such a purpose requirement 16 ensures that the information sought is relevant to the inquiry and not unduly 17 burdensome. See, e.g., FDIC v. Wentz, 55 F.3d 905, 908 (3d Cir. 1995) (reciting 18 requirements for investigation pursuant to an administrative subpoena).

19 Here, the Complaint does not plausibly allege that the Attorney General has 20 provided an adequate statement of the basis and purpose supporting the demand for 21 California’s unredacted voter file. It contains a handful of paragraphs describing 22 the explanation it provided to California in support of its CRA records request.
23 Compl. ¶¶ 38–40. This includes a partial quote of the statutory language of 52 24 U.S.C. § 20703, but notably fails to include the law’s relevant text: “This demand 25 shall contain a statement of the basis and the purpose therefor.” See Compl. ¶ 39.
26 Nowhere in the Complaint does the United States make any allegation as to the 27 specific basis for, or purpose of, its CRA request, including within the entirety of 28 the CRA count. See Compl. ¶¶ 46–49.

1 Plaintiff has provided no basis for why it believes California’s list 2 maintenance procedures violate the NVRA or HAVA. But even assuming that 3 enforcement of the NVRA and HAVA could be a proper “basis” for the demand, 4 nowhere in the Complaint does the United States explain the “purpose” of seeking 5 the unredacted information here. It does not attempt to explain why unredacted 6 voter files are necessary to determine whether California has undertaken a 7 “reasonable effort to remove the names of ineligible voters,” 52 U.S.C.
8 § 20507(a)(4), likely because those files are not in fact necessary. A single snapshot 9 of a state’s voter list does not provide information from which one could determine 10 if the state has made a “reasonable effort” to remove ineligible voters. Further, the 11 NVRA and HAVA both leave the mechanisms for conducting list maintenance 12 within the discretion of the State. See id. § 20507(a)(4); (c)(1); § 21083(a)(2)(A).
13 The procedures carried out by a state or locality establish its compliance; the 14 unredacted voter file does not. See, e.g., Pub. Int. Legal Found. v. Benson, 136 15 F.4th 613, 624–27 (6th Cir. 2025).

16 Moreover, any post hoc efforts of Plaintiff to contort its requests to meet the 17 requirements of the CRA fail when compared to the standards set in past cases, 18 where, for example, the demand explained that the Attorney General had 19 information indicating that there was a racial disparity in voter registration and that 20 he could determine whether that was in fact the case by examining the requested 21 records. See Lynd, 306 F.2d at 229 n.6 (“This demand is based upon information in 22 the possession of the Attorney General tending to show that distinctions on the 23 basis of race or color have been made with respect to registration and voting within 24 your jurisdiction.”). As such, Plaintiff’s statement invoking Title III does not 25 provide a “statement of the basis and the purpose therefor,” and thus does not 26 comply with the CRA. 52 U.S.C. § 20703.

27 The United States’ failure to identify its basis and purpose is unsurprising, 28 because it has made clear elsewhere that its purpose is not to evaluate compliance

1 with the list maintenance provisions of the NVRA or HAVA, but to sweep up 2 sensitive data of tens of millions of voters that can be used for any number of 3 reasons.³ Federal courts have confirmed that the Attorney General's authority to 4 examine election records is not unlimited and can be inhibited by courts if the 5 purposes are "speculative, . . . from idle curiosity," or for improper purposes.
6 Coleman, 208 F. Supp. at 201. In stark contrast to previous targeted demands under 7 the CRA, here DOJ has requested sensitive voter data from at least 40 states,⁴ and 8 sued eight states and one county that failed to immediately comply with its full 9 demands.⁵ This undermines any purported basis and purpose that Plaintiff may now 10 seek to advance. Cf. Coleman, 208 F. Supp. at 201 ("[The Attorney General] is 11 presumed to be acting in good faith and in the proper pursuit of his official duties 12 unless otherwise shown."). Plaintiff has provided no basis for arguing that 40 states 13 are violating the list maintenance provisions of the NVRA or HAVA, and arguing 14 as much would be implausible. DOJ cannot use the CRA as a limitless tool to 15 compile and consolidate voter data, rather it is a limited device to protect the right 16 to vote. See In re Gordon, 218 F.Supp. 826, 827 (S.D. Miss. 1963) ("It is like wise 17 a mistaken view to assume that such investigation of such records is an unlimited 18 discovery device which may be employed and used without restraint and in the 1 place and stead of a Rule 34 motion with its less restrained facilities for a complete 2 discovery of any relevant irregularities and improprieties in the administration of 3 the registration and voting laws of the state.”).

4 B. Any records disclosed under the CRA should be redacted to 5 protect the constitutional rights of voters.

6 Even had Plaintiff provided a valid basis and purpose to support its 7 demands—which it did not—any sensitive personal voter information would be 8 subject to redaction. Just like the NVRA, the text of Title III does not prohibit 9 redactions to ensure compliance with both state law and the Constitution. See supra
10 Part I.A; Project Vote, 682 F.3d at 339; Bellows, 92 F.4th at 56. The same privacy 11 and constitutional concerns that federal courts have found warrant redactions in 12 response to NVRA records requests apply equally to requests for the same records 13 under the CRA. Cf. Sheetz v. Cnty. of El Dorado, 601 U.S. 267, 281 (2024)
14 (Gorsuch, J., concurring) (“[O]ur Constitution deals in substance, not form.
15 However the government chooses to act, . . . it must follow the same constitutional 16 rules.”). Thus, even were Plaintiff entitled to records under Title III, the sensitive 17 personal information protected by California law still must be redacted. No matter 18 the statutory mechanism, conditioning the right to vote on the release of voters’ 19 sensitive private information “creates an intolerable burden on that right . . .”
20 Project Vote, 682 F.3d at 339 (citation omitted).

21 III. HAVA Does Not Provide for Data Disclosure.

22 Unlike the NVRA and CRA, HAVA does not have a disclosure provision.
23 Compare 52 U.S.C. § 20507(i)(1) (NVRA requiring states to make certain voting 24 records available for public inspection) and 52 U.S.C. § 20703 (CRA authorizing 25 the Attorney General to inspect, reproduce, or copy election records), with 52
26 U.S.C. § 20901 et seq. (HAVA containing no comparable provision). This alone 27 ends the inquiry: California cannot be legally required to disclose records pursuant 28

1 to a statute that does not authorize the disclosure of any records, let alone the 2 specific and expansive ones that Plaintiff demands.⁶

3 Plaintiff apparently contends that the mere existence of HAVA’s civil 4 enforcement mechanism allows for unredacted access to all of California’s voting 5 records. Compl. ¶¶ 30, 60; see 52 U.S.C. § 21111 (permitting the Attorney General 6 to enforce “the uniform and nondiscriminatory election technology and 7 administration requirements under sections 21081, 21082, 21083 [Section 303], 8 and 21083a.”). Not so. HAVA does not provide authority to access state records.
9 Rather, 52 U.S.C. § 21111 merely provides the Attorney General with the authority
10 to bring a civil action to enforce compliance with the four sections of HAVA 11 establishing the “uniform and nondiscriminatory election technology and 12 administration requirements” And none of the personal identifiers that Plaintiff 13 seeks are necessary to ensure that California’s system complies with these HAVA 14 sections. Indeed, the fact that other voting-related statutes that also include civil 15 enforcement mechanisms, such as the NVRA and the CRA, contain records 16 provisions when HAVA does not compel the conclusion that HAVA contains no 17 such authority. See, e.g., Gonzalez v. Herrera, 151 F.4th 1076, 1084 (9th Cir. 2025)
18 (courts “must assume ‘that Congress acts intentionally when it omits language 19 included elsewhere’” (citation omitted)). Because HAVA contains no provision 20 entitling the United States to state records, this cause of action must also fail as a 21 matter of law.

22 CONCLUSION

23 In exercising its legislative authority in enacting elections laws, Congress 24 has struck a careful balance between transparency and protecting individuals’ 25 fundamental, constitutional right to vote. Never has Congress concluded that the 26 privacy of sensitive personal information must give way in order for individuals to 27

1 access voter registration. And indeed, it would not have done so as conditioning 2 the right to vote on the release of private information “creates an intolerable burden 3 on that right.” Project Vote, 682 F.3d at 339 (citation omitted). For these reasons, 4 Plaintiff’s request for California’s full and unredacted electronic voter file should 5 be denied, and Plaintiff’s complaint should be dismissed with prejudice pursuant 6 to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).
